The 90s are back in a big way and we are loving how big hair is a thing again. To get a 90s inspired fluffy hair look all you need are a set of hair rollers and some hair spray. This no heat tutorial.

Are lazy heatless curls right for You?

If you're a low-maintenance gal who often teeters between styling her hair and rocking a bun, lazy heatless curls are your perfect match. A 'do that requires minimal effort, it's ideal for when you're working with second or third-day hair, if you want to achieve quick waves while you multitask, or are just having a lazy day.

How do you do heatless curls?

If you have limp, fine hair and want to inject some bounce and volume into your strands, this is the perfect heatless curls tutorial for you. Once again, all you need are a few hair clips, a spray bottle filled with water, and your hairspray of choice. Get a similar look with our Dark Brown Balayage hair extensions.

Are heat-free curls a good idea?

The prospect of healthier strands from heat-free styling is certainly alluring. Heatless curls are also designed to be comfortable, easy to use, and versatile enough for a variety of hair types, whether you're rocking a short-hair lob, have waist-length strands, natural hair, or super-fine hair that can barely hold a curl (until now, that is).

How to use catching curls heatless hair ribbon?

Catching Curls Heatless Hair Ribbon for getting comfy, cozy, and curly. Still Snoozing Scrunchie Set to wrap around your ends. Curled Up Claw Clip to secure your curler all night long. Drawstring Pouch to store everything. Start with damp hair and place the Catching Curls Heatless Hair Ribbon over your head.

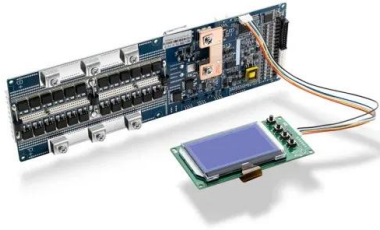

How do you use a heatless hair curler?

We like the Kitsch Heatless Hair Curler in Satin, which comes with a satin-covered foam curling rod (imagine a plush mini pool noodle) and two satin scrunchies. To apply, start with damp (not wet!) hair and split hair into two sections. Starting with the front sections, wrap hair around the rod away from the face.

Can you get corkscrew curls overnight?

Using a set like the Vintage Cosmetic Company's Pink Bendy Hair Curlers, you can get corkscrew curls overnight. Simply twist small section of hair around the rods, fixing them in place close to the scalp by bending the ends of the rods together. If uncomfortable, you can wrap with a scarf or bonnet overnight.
