Overview

How to simulate a rotor blade in a wind turbine?

The usual procedure is to carry out a load simulation with an initial model draft of a rotor blade. In relation to the wind turbine, the rotor blade is described by its stiffness distribution, its mass and its static moment.

What is a rotor blade in a wind turbine?

The rotor blade is the key component of a wind turbine generator (WTG) and converts the energy of the wind into a mechanically useful form of energy. It represents a significant cost factor in the overall context of the turbine and at the same time has an enormous impact on the yield of the turbine.

Who makes wind turbine blades?

Veritas, D.N. Design and Manufacture of Wind Turbine Blades, Offshore and Onshore Turbines; Standard DNV-DS-J102; Det Norske Veritas: Copenhagen, Denmark, 2010. Case, J.; Chilver, A.H. Strength Of Materials; Edward Arnold Ltd.: London, UK, 1959.

Why do wind turbine blades have a specific aerofoil profile?

The sensitivity of blades to soiling, off design conditions including stall and thick cross sections for structural purposes are the main driving forces for the development of wind turbine specific aerofoil profiles [1,26].

How are rotor blades selected?

A selection of different structural concepts for rotor blades is plotted in Fig. 6 and shows rotor blade mass as a function of the rotor diameter. The selection includes all wind classes, material combinations and generations of the last 30 or so years.

What can be used as a fall-back for rotor blades?

Alternative types of wood and also non-renewable raw materials based on conventional materials can be used as a fall-back here. The latter can even increase the CO₂ footprint of blades, when rotor blades are burnt or co-processed, for example.
